Introduction

The Yoruba have a rich cultural heritage and various ways of showing identity and aesthetics. The facial mark or tribal mark is a very noticeable part of it.

Facial marks were used to beautify, identify royal lineages, rich/popular families, warrior families, and to mark slaves in the previous times. However, it is a practice that is longer done due to westernization.

This project will focus on tribal marks in Yoruba culture.

Task

Research the different types of tribal marks in the Yoruba culture here.

You are to determine the differences between three types of tribal marks from the Yoruba culture. To ease your task, the facial marks to compare have been selected for you: Pele, keke and Abaja.

Lastly, you will design your own tribal mark.

Process

You will be put in groups of threes and fours to find and compare the different tribal marks.

Next, you will list the different types you find and describe their differences. Also, point out how you feel they may have made people beautiful and served as an identity marker.

Individually, design your own tribal marks and give an interpretation of what these marks mean to you.
